I was raised in an artistic family in the former Yugoslavia, where I spent much of my childhood at my mother's ceramics studio, learning the secrets of the trade. My art education began in Belgrade more than 20 years ago, where I attended secondary school for Design. I later studied photography in Prague and in 1993 moved to New York, studying Hebrew calligraphy with calligrapher Jay S. Greenspan. In 1997 I moved with my family to Krakow. There, I earned a Masters degree in Fine Art and Art Education, mastering the technique of linocut by the renowned Jerzy Jedrysiak. My graphics and paintings have been published and exhibited internationally. I am an active member of Manhattan Graphic Center, Printmaking Council of NJ, and Society of American Graphic Artists. I now live in New Jersey.
